

Building a Culture of Health Across the United States

Clinical Scholars is a leadership development program led by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with support from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. It engages clinically active health care providers to collaborate in teams with fellow clinicians from a wide range of disciplines—including nursing, pharmacy, allied health, and social work. The teams take on complex problems in their communities, addressing the social factors that underlie health from their perspectives as both health care providers and members of the community. For more information, visit clinical-scholars.org or see rwjf.org/changeleaders to learn about the 2016 and 2017 cohorts and find additional leadership opportunities.
